Rialto TPC recognised as demonstrating commercial improvement and ROI at HR Distinction Awards 2013

Birmingham: Tuesday 22nd January 2013

Rialto are pleased to have been nominated as finalists for the HR Distinction Awards 2013 in Adding Value.

The Award category celebrates the demonstration of value added in a business through direct profitable results from HR strategies, which was achieved through the implementation of the Rialto business transformation and culture change programme – TPC (Transforming the Performance Culture).

The Judging Panel also considered a number of additional aspects for the award, including quality of implementation, focus on HR excellence and delivery, innovation and the uniqueness of the idea and impact on the employees within the organisation.

Working in partnership with Manufacturing Company Richard Burbidge Ltd, Rialto embarked upon a company wide business transformation programme to achieve a step change in employee performance and engagement. The project was designed to empower all employees to take more ownership, engagement and accountability, focusing on delivering greater quality to the customer.

Rialto Chief Executive Richard Chiumento commented on the Award: "It's a real achievement for our team to continue to see how TPC can truly make a difference to the organisations we support. This is the 5th year we've been designing and delivering our innovative TPC programmes and the methodology continues to demonstrate that HR can deliver ROI and impact bottom line results by challenging the traditional change programme/restructuring options.
